Why Should I Transfer to Get a Bachelors Degree?

CAREER SPOTLIGHT– Administration of Justice

What Can You Do with a Degree in Administration of Justice?

Administration of Justice degrees are typically available at the associate's degree and bachelor's degree levels. Many careers, such as those that involve the courts, law, forensics and advanced crime investigation often require graduate degrees in criminal justice or forensics. Administration of justice degrees can be used as a stepping stone on the path to such professions. Other options for a graduate with an administration of justice degree include careers in forensics or law, but these normally require further education at the master's or doctoral level.

Career Options

Administration of Justice degrees typically lead to careers that fall within two categories: law enforcement or corrections. Some examples of law enforcement careers are police officers and detectives. Parole officers fall within the corrections category and may be a good career choice for candidates with a bachelor's degree in administration of justice, because this field requires a four year degree.
